

Hall County Participates In Regional Water Conservation Campaign

July 2, 2013

Hall County Government is proud to participate in the "How much water do you use?" campaign released Monday by the Metropolitan North Georgia Water Planning District and the Atlanta Regional Commission. The campaign encourages all of us to consider how much water we use, find ways to use less and take the water conservation pledge at MyDropCounts.org.

"My Drop Counts" is a grassroots regional water conservation campaign developed by the Metro Water District designed to create a culture of water conservation in metro Atlanta. Hall County is one of 15 counties that make up the Metro Water District.

As a participant in the campaign, a link to the water conservation pledge has been posted to hallcounty.org. TV 18- The Government Channel will also be airing public service announcements for the "How much water do you use?" campaign this month.

Contact info@mydropcounts.org for more information.